

The present study focuses on the Partition of India and the dilemmas of North Bengal. It further sheds new light on the changing demographic profile of the region, its administrative reorganisation and jurisdiction changes, and socio-political tensions in North Bengal since 1947. The book addresses the contesting identities, inter-state/districts migration in North Bengal. This book will be of interest to scholars and researchers of history, political science, sociology, anthropology, migration and Diaspora studies.
