

Sikkim has the highest prevalence of suspected diabetes. Most of the villagers of Sikkim suffering from diabetes use medicinal plants in the form of traditional medicine to keep diabetes under control. Such 22 medicinal plants have been described in the present book. Further, research related to antidiabetic activity of these plants are discussed with the aim that the book may help the researchers to do further research on these novel plants.